ABILITIES

STARTING ABILITY

Spellcasting: You always have with you your spellbook (it does not count in the load). During your adventure you can collect new spells and transcribe those in your spellbook. You can cast a spell if you can read the spellbook, you can satisfy the verbal component of the spell and you are able to spend mana equal to its level.
When you first go on an adventure, you alredy know all the lv0 spells.

EXPERTISE

- Expertise: Choose a special ability from another source. How did you learn it? _____

SPECIAL ABILITIES

- School of magic: Every wizard specializes in a single school of magic. When you cast a spell from your chosen school, reduce its mana cost by 1 (minimum 1). [NE]
  Your school: _____
- Ritual: When you have time and safety, you may perform a ritual. Describe the desired effect you want to achieve and the GM will tell you the ritual's requirements (time, material components, semantic components...) and its level. Now, you may decide not to proceed with the ritual. Once all requirements are met, spend mana equal to its level and roll ATTUNE.
- Perfect timing: Every spell is stronger when cast at the right moment. When you try to cast a spell while an ally has SET UP your action, take +1 effect level.
- Magical knowledge: When you witness a spell's effect, you recognize which school of magic it belongs to.
- Logic analyzer: When you take time to analyze something or someone, take +1d.
- Erudite: When you SWAY someone using your knowledge, take +1d.
- Counterspell: You may expend your special armor or spend 2 mana to resist the consequences of a spell you can see being cast. [NE]
- Veiled Spell: You can cast spells of level 1, 2 or 3 without the verbal component. Casting a spell silently may increase the potential for complications. [NE]
- Prepared spells: When you choose your load, choose a number of spells up to your playbook level. You can cast those spells without consulting your spellbook. You may change the spell the next time you choose your load. [NE]
- Academic figure: When you visit a place of learning, you notice a colleague, mentor, or familiar face who might assist you.
